Cash, Credit, and Your Finances: The Teen Years

In Cash, Credit, and Your Finances: The Teen Years

Jill Russo Foster introduces teenagers to the basic concepts of managing money. Jill discusses setting and living within a budget, working with a bank, opening accounts, managing credit and debt, paying for a college education, and making major purchases, such as a computer or car. Along the way, Jill provides tips, worksheets, and practical examples in a friendly, clear style.

Jill's website,

www.CashCreditandYourFinances.com,

provides additional resources and tools that teenagers and parents can use to start building solid financial lives. You can receive her free reports - 7 Credit Card Myths and Eleven Steps to Prevent Identity Theft, by signing up for Quick Tips, her weekly financial tips email newsletter.

Currently working in the mortgage industry, Jill has seen people who are seriously in debt or who have little or no savings. They need to refinance their homes to use the equity to pay off their consumer debt. Then they come back again to refinance a second time to get out of more debt. Jill also sees couples who make good salaries, but don't have enough money to pay their monthly bills on time.

“Cash, Credit, and Your Finances: The Teen Years is an amazing resource for teenagers on how to begin the road to financial independence. Jill gently guides readers on everything from opening a checking and savings account, to managing their allowance and more. I wish this book had been out when I was a teenager. It would have saved me from making costly mistakes.”
